LEGAL ACCOUNTS SALARY SURVEY 2020 LONDON

Executive summary:

This year's results are being written up during unprecedented times. For the vast majority of firms, the impact of the Coronavirus has switched focus from profitable growth to weathering the storm of FY20/21.

Expectations of pay increases will understandably take a back seat this year, with financial bonuses also likely to be hit hard. The findings of our survey will therefore provide a benchmark for where salaries stood before Covid-19 hit, with an anticipation that we are unlikely to see much movement for the year ahead.

Since we published our last survey a year ago, we've seen continued, steady demand for legal finance staff, with US law firms again stimulating a large amount of movement in the market. Revenue Control continued to be the busiest area for hiring activity, with UK and US firms increasing headcount, particularly at senior/experienced levels.

Senior appointments have also been more frequent than in previous years, with a steady flow of vacancies arising at Finance Director, Head of Finance, Financial Controller and Finance Manager levels. We've also seen demand for Finance Systems hires increasing again - particularly at support and team levels.

The survey results showed that, overall, the likelihood of salary increases improved, with 73% of respondents enjoying a raise over the past 12 months, whereas the reward of financial bonuses dipped only marginally to 58%. Those working for US law firms were far more likely to strengthen their financial position in comparison to their UK counterparts.

For the year ahead we will inevitably see a significant impact on hiring activity and salary growth as a result of the Coronavirus epidemic. It's too early to predict to what extent the market is likely to be hit, but with business services functions generally leaner than they were before the 2008 global financial crisis, we anticipate that there will still be plenty of movement when the market bounces back.

If you would like to discuss any of the information in this survey or other market trends and benchmarking, we would welcome the opportunity to share our knowledge further, so please feel free to get in touch any time.
